Ladies and Gentlemen,

Well known amongst the front rank of our comedy dramatists is H. F. Maltby, who has over thirty renowned successes to his credit, and he is part author of the laughter show that my Court Players will present to you next week, "THE AGE OF YOUTH", which he wrote in collaboration with Fredi Wynn. It was staged in London at the Kingsway Theatre with Iris Hoey in the leading role.

It is set in the peaceful and thoroughly domesticated household of the Merrick family in a delightful house on the Sussex downs, where news suddenly comes that Mrs. Merrick's first husband's mother, "Grannie", has arrived in England from Australia, where she has been living for a considerable period. Much to everybody's astonishment, when she appears they see, instead of the elderly and infirm lady they expected, a beautifully and stylishly dressed person who has not only learned to grow old graciously but also glamorously. So much so that the menfolk are immediately attracted to her, much to the rage of the womenfolk, and a feud ensues between husbands and wives and a couple contemplating marriage. Eventually a middle-aged bachelor's doubts as to the genuineness of this "Grannie" grow to a certainty, and so does his love for her, and a cross examination scene on the subject leads to an exposure of her imposture, much to the relief of everyone.

So all ends happily and so will a visit to the Hippodrome to see the charming comedy, "THE AGE OF YOUTH".

With compliments,

Yours sincerely,
